IRB Training (for anyone doing research involving human participants).

We now offer the same course for first time training and renewal/refresher training

In October 2018, the IRB office re-examined our training program and made changes to better align our offerings with the issues facing our research community. If you have already completed any of the previous Cornell IRB training courses, there is no action you need to take as a result of these changes. When the time comes for you to renew your human subjects training (required every five years), you will be prompted to take new course. There is no longer any separate “refresher” course.

1. Go to the ORIA Training page: http://www.oria.cornell.edu/training/citi/login/index.cfm and click on the big red button that says “Take a Course.” Use your Cornell NetID and password to log in to a third-party training website called CITI.

2. You will be taken to the CITI training page. Click on “Cornell University Courses” and find a menu called “My Learner Tools.” Click on “Add a Course or Update Learner Groups.”

3. You are now on the “CITI Course Selection” page. Scroll down for Human Subjects Research (IRB) listings:

   Click the box to choose the course “IRB Training.” Then scroll down to the bottom of the page and click “Submit.”

4. This will take you back to the Main Menu, and a listing of all CITI courses you have enrolled in. You will see “IRB Training” on the list. Click on “IRB Training”.
5. You will come to a list of the 8 modules (sections) that make up the course. Before you can begin, you will need to click on and complete the “Integrity Assurance Statement.”

6. You can now begin the first course module, “History and Ethical Principles.” After each module you will be prompted to take a quiz to test your knowledge. You must pass each of the 8 quizzes. If you fail a quiz, return to the module and re-take it.
